"This well-plotted novel is certain to appeal to mystery lovers everywhere."

*1/2 Romantic Times TOP PICK

Popular local author Diana Killian returns with the third installment in her acclaimed "Poetic Death" series set in England's scenic Lake District, featuring American teacher Grace Hollister and her partner-in-crime Peter Fox, a dashing "reformed" jewel thief turned antique dealer.

In Sonnet of the Sphinx, Grace and Peter are hot on the trail of a long-lost sonnet by Romantic poet Percy Shelley, only to have troubling secrets from Peter's dark past come to light. Romance—and murder—beckon once again in another spirited romp in a series the critics have tagged as "funny," "clever," and "elegantly written."

"Offering generous portions of murder and mayhem without losing the composure of a traditional cozy, it is the appealing summertime setting of Britain's Lake District (and) the enigmatic relationship between Grace and Peter that give the book its charm."
